Capt. F. E. Withee said Wednesday afternoon that the last opportunity to enlist in the local company will be given next Monday evening, when a regular drill will be held at the armory. Enlistments, of course, will be received any day up to and including that time. It is anticipated that a few more volunteers will be secured between now and next Monday evening, though the time to avoid draft is getting very short.

That the local company, which has members scattered in all directions, will be promptly mobilized is indicated by what Captain Withee said Wednesday afternoon.

"How do you keep tabs on the men so that you can mobilize them quickiy?" he was asked.

"I have a telephone number at which each man can be reached, but I don't have to keep tabs on the men; they are keeping tabs on me. They certainly are very anxious to know when they are going, and just as anxious to go."

It is this spirit that makes Danielson proud of its company and gives it assurance that the command will make a splendid record.
